1. Assemble

You will have an initial conversation with a relationship coach and lawyer to find out about the Agreeable process.

Agreeable is unique because our relationship coach is also a qualified counsellor and our lawyers are also qualified family mediators.

You will each have a 1:1 consultation as well as a joint meeting with your relationship coach

- Emotional and practical support before the Agreeable process begin.
- Agreeing an anchor statement - the guiding document that provides the foundation for the way forward.

Assemble

2. Gather

Joint meeting with your relationship coach and lawyer

- Confirmation of ground rules including commitment to openness and willingness to work together.
- Review of anchor statements, aims and priorities.
- Review of information needed and introduction to Engage (our digital legal pathway to gather required information to be able to make informed decisions).

You will each have a 1:1 consultation with your lawyer

- Opportunity to meet individually with the lawyer that will be working with you both.
- Information on law and the legal process.
- Assessment of alignment of interests.

Gather

3. Review

Identification of issues

- A joint session with your lawyer and relationship coach to review Engage submissions, analyse the information, clarify the issues, identify the need for any other expert help for example in relation to pensions or tax.

Working out options

- Joint sessions with your lawyer and relationship coach to consider the outcome options available and reach an agreement.

Emotional support and/or co-parenting support

- Alongside the identification of issues sessions and working out options sessions you will have sessions together with your relationship coach.

4. Evaluate

Preparation of documents

- Your lawyer will meet with another lawyer in the Agreeable team to provide them with the information needed to draft the documents required to convert the agreement reached into a legally binding order, this offers you a further check and review of the agreement reached.
- Your lawyer will share the draft documents with you and provide you with advice on the documents.
- You will both meet with your lawyer and the relationship coach to go through the documents, to check and review the achievement and to sign the documents.
- You will each talk individually with the relationship coach to reflect and to make sure you are ready to proceed.

Evaluate

5. Enable

Implementation

- We will lodge the agreement at Court for approval by a Judge and advise you of the outcome.
- We will assist you in relation to the instruction of other experts to implement your agreement, such as financial adviser or conveyancing lawyers.

Six-month check

- Your relationship coach will check in with each of you individually to see how you are transitioning to the next phase of your lives.
